How learners will grow

Social education influencers · school and university pilots · our mobile app · Partnership Leads · sponsors' own campaigns

Three learners, one network

For Barclays José and Josh are who Barclays sponsors. Samantha could be a Barclays colleague.

Josh

Personalisation. Collaboration. AI.

- Builds his own keyword lists from what he is learning
- Learns from friends and challenges them on the leaderboard
- Asks KAIL, Kewordal's AI learning assistant, to explain whatever he is stuck on
- Engages with mentors and teachers as part of a social learning community

Samantha

Beyond the curriculum

- Uses Kewordal for her own personal self-development
- A City of London lawyer building lists in her own field to help learners
- Adds expert knowledge far beyond any syllabus to accelerate the learner's attainment
- Can become a mentor and coach, if she chooses

José

Global impact

- A learner in a Brazilian favela with less access to education resources
- Connected to Samantha through a shared list that helps him learn English
- Sponsored by Samantha to use Kewordal - also helping his family, who cannot afford to, and inspiring the friends connected to him

Helping 10 million Josés. Connecting 1 million Samanthas.

What learners need

For Barclays Barclays' people are the positive role models learners are missing: their knowledge, shared safely and at scale.

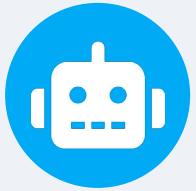

Fragmented by design

LMS is not social; social networks are not built for learning; general AI is not safeguarded for minors.

No wider support

Learners lack social tools to reach wider support, and experts have no scalable way to share knowledge.

Missing mentors

Millions of learners have little or no access to mentors as positive role models and education influencers.

The need One place that brings learning, positive role models and safe AI together for millions of learners.

Kewordal, with KAIL built in

For Barclays Safeguarding-first by design: safe for the learners Barclays sponsors, and for Barclays' brand.

What is Kewordal?

- A social education and learning network: educating people, and learning from people
- Build it: turn any topic into a keyword list in seconds
- Play it: every keyword becomes a question in games, quizzes and challenges
- Connect with it: follow, challenge friends and climb leaderboards
- 200 subjects, from law to engineering

Watch a short demo of Kewordal

What KAIL does

- Explains any keyword in clear, age-appropriate language
- Summarises a list thematically
- Suggests additional relevant keywords
- Shows how two keywords relate
- Gives real-world context for why a keyword matters

Built-in safeguards

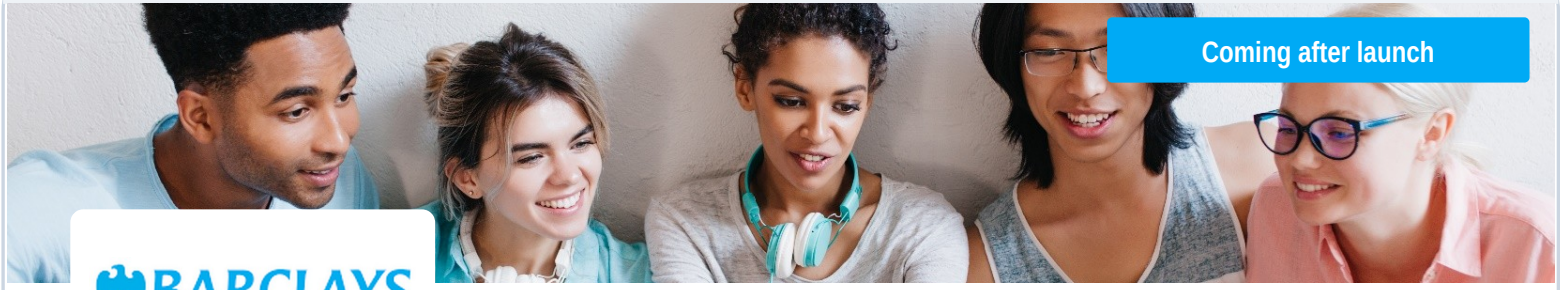

- Scoped to the learner's list, not open-ended chat
- Vocabulary adapts to the account's age band
- Permanent accuracy notice linking to a public support page
- Thumbs up/down gives young users a safe way to flag a bad answer
- No permanent storage of conversations
- No AI training on user data without explicit opt-in

Every learner Barclays sponsors gets the same safeguarded, age-adaptive experience.

The Pioneers’ Circle

Shape how banking engages with social education and learning, globally, and bring your peers with you.

By invitation

For pioneering sponsors, starting with each sector’s three Pioneer Sponsors, who take turns to lead their sector. Our partner-level relationship.

Members help to shape how Kewordal rolls out in banking, as company coordinators did in the mentoring scheme Michael ran (page 12). Michael's background

Reach your peers

Members lead outreach to peer banks. Kewordal celebrates the sector as a whole, “Banking, led by its Pioneer Sponsors”, so the pioneers and the whole sector share the credit, and sectors can see how they compare.

The forerunner of the Patrons’ Circle

Built on proven experience

For Barclays Kewordal's two foundations were proven in practice long before the platform was built.

Social good isn't a feature we added. It's the reason Kewordal exists.

1 Proven: keyword learning works

Where Kewordal lists began

Flashcards, spider diagrams and similar tools are long-established ways to learn. Keyword lists came from Michael's own experience.

He first used them as a student, having left school with below-average qualifications. They helped him simplify information, remember it, and close the perceived attainment gap on students he felt were brighter. Kewordal is built on that method.

2 Proven: companies want to engage

Modelling a future of corporate engagement

Corporate social responsibility shows how much companies want to contribute to education.

Michael previously ran one of the country's largest mentoring schemes, in Tower Hamlets: professionals from more than 60 organisations, including the Bank of England, Goldman Sachs, Deloitte & Touche and Unilever, mentoring students from less privileged backgrounds.

Led by that experience

Michael Watson

Founder & CEO, Kewordal

His former roles include education recruitment director; external adviser to the Social Exclusion Unit, Cabinet Office; PwC (education consultant); leading two mentoring programmes; and vice chair of governors at a primary and a secondary school. He holds a PhD in Education.

Michael's background

Kewordal now makes this possible for businesses globally, with the first sponsors in each sector leading the way.

Built by people who believe in it

For Barclays The commitment that built Kewordal goes into every learner Barclays sponsors.

A Tech for Good team, from the very start.

Our story

Kewordal's core team began as volunteers.

Since September 2025 they have built the platform together, each giving on average 12 months of their time, often alongside studies and jobs.

Engineering, design, product, content and marketing: a team that chose to build something for good.
